At the Nevada Monday Night

Cash Knight and the "Four Rosebuds" with the Raymond-Teal Musical Comedy Co.

With the advent of the new musical comedy, "Variety Isle," presented by the Raymond Teal Musical Comedy company, which will begin a week's engagement at the Nevada theater, the people of Tonopah will have an opportunity of seeing one of the best musical comedy stock companies on the coast. "Variety Isle," the opening bill, is a rollicking piece of theatrical property with laughter as the main keynote. The fun starts at the size of the curtain and is continued through every minute of

REMAINS OF SEVENTH GIROUX VICTIM FOUND

The remains of John McNulty, one of the unfortunate men to lose his life in the fire of the Giroux shaft last August, and for whose body a search of the workings of the mine has been repeatedly made without results, was recovered Monday from the dump in the bottom of the 1400-foot Giroux shaft by the shift engaged in clearing the shaft of the last water contained therein, and incidentally of the last effects of the appalling disaster.

The remains are said to be in a horrible decomposed and mortified condition, although submerged for all these months beneath water. A portion of the limbs were recovered by the morning shift in removing the debris from the bottom of the shaft. The trunk, with head attached, was taken out in the afternoon intact, being held together presumably by the clothing only, carefully placed in a box and brought to the surface. Later the two acts. Heinz Pickleheimer, as a soldier of misfortune, who becomes king of Variety Isle, played by Mr. Teal, and Louie Kroutzmeier, his secretary, by Mr. Cash Knight, have plenty to do and are in the limelight throughout. They have many escapades and the way they extricate themselves from all sorts of seemingly hard difficulties keeps the action and interest at an exhilarating pitch. The 14 musical number are of a kind that can be whistled and retained and the other features are out of the ordinary.

They were transferred to the undertaker's basket, and this afternoon were brought to Nevins & Graham's undertaking parlors in Ely, where they will be held until such time as arrangements for the burial can be made with the relatives of the deceased in Montana. Coroner Cartwright was notified of the recovery of the body immediately upon its being brought to the surface, and has made all necessary arrangements for the holding of an inquest to inquire into the cause of death next Wednesday morning.

It is said by some of the miners who were on shift at the time of the discovery of the body, that there was still a portion of the old belford wound about the trunk, which would indicate that the man possibly became entangled in the belford, and was by it pulled from the cage when it started up the shaft. However, just how the man came to leave the cage and lose his life, will always remain a dark mystery.

To the miners working in the shaft at the time of the uncovering of McNulty's remains, the slight was a nasty one, since it brought back to memory the disastrous fire of August 23, picturing its most horrible and death-dealing results, when seven out of twelve men at work in the shaft lost their lives, although they made frantic and heroic efforts to effect an escape with what means were at hand.

Realizing the awe-inspiring scene, and the difficulty with which men were able to work at all after the recovery of McNulty's remains, the foreman instructed all those at work in the shaft to lay-off the remainder of the shift.—Ely Express.

LIFE.

Life is just a little worry, just a little care; just a little bit of hurry, mixed with do and dare. Life is one eternal hustle, morning, noon and night; every hour we must rustle, every minute fight. Life's a whirl of joy and sorrow, mirth and smiles and tears, but we're hoping that tomorrow sadness disappears. Life's an airy, fairy hubble; one day we are glad, then the next we're courting trouble and our hours are sad. Life is full of love and laughter, cheeriness and light; if the sunshine we are after then our days are bright. But when we renew our growing—bling! out goes the spark, and we're stumbling and we're prowling in the very pitey dark. Life is heaven if we make it useful to our friends, but 'tis Hades if we stake it for dishonest ends. Life's a fountain-head of sweetness if we will it so, and of joy in its completeness we may learn to know.

WANT PROHIBITION.

INVENTOR TELLS ABOUT DISCOVERY RECENTLY MAKE

MAKER OF RUBBER SUBSTITUTE PROVES TO BE A WEALTHY PHILADELPHIAN.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 16.—A quiet, self-contained man of middle age was discovered at one of Philadelphia's leading hotels yesterday who acknowledged with much reluctance that he was the inventor of the process by which any waste fibrous matter may be reduced to a substitute for hard rubber, superior to it, or metamorphosed into a number of substitutes now in great demand by the leading industries of the world. He is John B. Hall, a member of a prominent Philadelphia family.

In sharp contrast to the popular conception of the inventor which lends to him the qualities of a dreamer, Hall conveys the impression of a man who likes to deal with facts only. He is possessed of large independent means and is the head of several manufacturing concerns in this city. Hall's attitude toward his invention, the possibilities of which he admitted are virtually limitless commercially, is a curious one. While he has received numerous offers for it, he declares it to be one of too great consequence to place in the hands of any individual or corporation that is not big enough to protect it.

"It is my idea to benefit the whole south by the use of waste cotton stalks and frosted bolls, then to put into the hands of the individual a substance that my experts and many electrical and mechanical authorities tell me has unusual money making possibilities. I could undertake the manufacture of it myself and will do so if it becomes necessary to carry out my ideas. But I do not care to go into it myself if I can avoid it."

"It is fortunate for me," and I hope, fortunate for the countries with which I am dealing, as well as for the south, that I am so situated as to bide my own time in the matter. I want to dispose of the process where it will do the most good for the greatest number of persons. Of course, I shall demand protection for the invention, whatever I do."

"I might say as a sort of an earnest for the sincerity of my stand in this respect that I am now holding in abeyance the offer of a very prominent New York financier to organize a $50,000,000 company for the manufacture of the product."

ANTELOPE STILL SHOWING SIGNS OF FINE FUTURE

As the Jordan brothers and Reilly property continues to produce and is steadily growing richer, interest in Antelope is unabated. Tuesday night at a depth of about 50 feet the bottom of the shaft showed still richer ore. Word has come that the quantity of silver in the ore has greatly increased, so much so, that the richer part seems to be nearly all malleable metal.

Yesterday evening the last wagon load of ore arrived to complete the second carload shipment, which will be sampled tomorrow. From the appearances of the ore that has been hauled here the past two weeks, and the very evident increasing richness, this last carload is confidently expected to yield much more than $242 per ton, which was what the first carload sampled.

This steady enhancement has encouraged all those who are industriously working the leases, for they feel that when they make a strike the values will be profitable.—Goldfield Tribune.
